

ABSTRACT

A fuel injection system (3) of an internal combustion engine has, depending on the number of cylinders, at least one local pump element (1), assigned to each injector (2), of a unit fuel injector or a pump-line-nozzle system for compressing the fuel. The injector (2) and/or the supply line to the injector (2) form a local pressure reservoir chamber.

Fig. 1